Core Training: Satisfaction
Person-Centered Thinking Facilitator's Guide

Online Resources

- This site has a person-centered thinking video that can be used for presentation. It covers the competencies that focus on self-determination and the importance of values based decision making:
  http://www.mnddc.org/parallels2/one/video/person-centered.html

- This site covers the concepts of 'important to' and 'important for', as well as, core values and the origins of person-centered thinking and planning:
  http://www.dhhs.state.nc.us/olts/what/pct_practice_notes.pdf

- This website covers topics such as person-centered planning, life choice planning, important to and important for. Additionally, this link encompasses the person-centered studies of Michael Smull and Leigh-Ann Kingsbury:
  http://www.dmh.missouri.gov/ada/provider/sti/03/personcentered1.pdf

Hitting the Books

- This journal article focuses on person centered planning for youth and adults with developmental disabilities, which includes core values and the planning process:
  http://www.eric.ed.gov/ERICDocs/data/ericdocs2sql/content_storage_01/0000019b/80/25/a4/b5.pdf

- This manual contains a wealth of information about person-centered planning. Utilize all 12 chapters as a guide to gain information and further develop training. It extensively covers many of the competencies listed in the curriculum http://rtc.umn.edu/docs/pcpmanual1.pdf

- This is a book reference that covers information about values based decision making and planning and the team's support of the person's values:
  http://www.brookespublishing.com/store/books/pengra-448x/index.htm

- Becoming a Person Centered System by Michael Smull, Mary Lou Bourne, and Helen Sanderson, April 2009.